

Catarrh

Is a constitutional disease. It originates in a scrofulous condition of the blood and depends on that condition. It often causes headache and dizziness, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, affects the vocal organs, disturbs the stomach. It is always radically and permanently cured by the blood-purifying, alterative and tonic action of

Hood's Sarsaparilla

This great medicine has wrought the most wonderful cures of all diseases depending on scrofula or the scrofulous habit.

HAY FEVER'S CONQUEROR

Breathe Hyomei and Escape This Dreaded Summer Visitor.

By the use of Hyomei, you can save an expensive trip to the mountains and escape weeks of suffering. This remarkable remedy for the cure of hay fever, kills the germs of the disease, soothes and heals the irritated mucous membrane, if used two or three weeks before the time of the usual appearance of hay fever will prevent the attack.

The complete Hyomei treatment consists of a neat pocket inhaler, through which Hyomei is breathed, a bottle of Hyomei, and a medicine dropper. The air taken into the lungs in this way is filled with healing balsams and forms a perfect safeguard against attacks of hay fever or cold.

Those who have had hay fever, know how little help can be gained by stomach dosing in this disease. Hyomei is the only scientific yet common sense treatment for the trouble. It is easy enough for any one to say that a remedy will give satisfaction, but F. E. Bryan's offer to refund the money if Hyomei does not do all that is claimed for it, certainly inspires faith in the treatment.

Hyomei really gives you in your own home, a change of climate, and hay fever sufferers know from past experience that this has been the only thing that afforded them relief. By breathing Hyomei a few times daily, you can save the expense and trouble of a mountain trip and avoid all danger of hay fever.

The Excursionist.

Fredrickson's excursion at five a. m. He started with much and mail. To go to a party and catch the early excursion train. His lunch in a shoebox, carefully packed. He carried it with him. He was in the dining car. To keep it away from him. He said it as soon as he possibly can. To get it out of the way. A sort of compromise, jammed-up hash. Then tried to enjoy the day. But crowded and jostled on right and left. He reached the picnic ground. Where, having already devoured his lunch. He hungrily wanders 'round. He stands in the narrow aisle. Arriving at home quite as tired as though he had walked every single mile. But still he considers he really must have had a delightful day. For hasn't he ridden a hundred miles at less than the fare one way?

The Wallace Bros' Circus train was wrecked in the Grand Trunk yards at Durand, Mich., Friday just before daylight, and 21 men, mostly employees of the circus, including a few performers, were killed outright, while 20 more were injured and some fatally. This circus visited Randolph four years ago and is remembered for the excellence of its show, but also, and more particularly for the plausible shell-game gentlemen who pulled the wool over the eyes and off the backs of the confiding populace in an amazing fashion. At the time of the wreck the show was traveling in two sections from Lansing to Lapeer, and the accident was caused by the failure of the air brakes to work in stopping the second section of the train in time to prevent a collision. One elephant and two camels were killed outright while the rest of the animals escaped. This is the second time the Wallace train has been wrecked within a month.

A Phase of Village Life.

There is something pleasing, a trifle amusing and occasionally embarrassing in the intense and vivid interest that people of small communities take in all that goes to make up the sum of each other's living. Our relationship through Adam seems particularly close at times, and the brotherhood of man a great deal more than an abstract topic of clerical discourse. We listen in disapproval and incredulity to tales of inhabitants of crowded cities dwelling side by side without knowing each other by sight, being able to call each other by name or over running into each other's back doors to borrow an egg or a drawing of tea. We shudder at such a natural indifference and at the thought of the terrible loneliness which would assail one in sickness and trouble surrounded by neighbors of that description.

Better, far better is that closely connected little hamlet in which they were idle for one to attempt to conceal his age, for some old lady, sure to remember just when he was born, and in which one's goings out and comings in are of sufficient importance to be duly noted. Better is it that any one of a dozen people could write our biography as well as we could do it ourselves, and, on a pinch, give to the listers a fairly accurate inventory of all our real and personal property.

Occasionally some vain and frivolous woman, perhaps, allows herself to think that she would like to go to church in all the bravery of Sunday attire and not have the humiliating consciousness that every eminent worshipper in the edifice is cognizant of the fact that she has just turned, pressed and made over her best black silk for the fifteenth time and, furthermore, can tell as well as she can where she pieced the back breadth to form the sweep of the prevailing fashion. But this very knowledge of her little shifts and turns has a salutary restraint on consuming vanity and false pride founded on artfully covered patches.

There is, too, no particular use in trying to cultivate a disagreeable reserve of manner in a community that joins to close and accurate observation a startling cleverness in putting two and two together. Why burden oneself with the airs of a Vanderbilt when the neighbors have "noticed" that no grocery team stop voluntarily at the door, and it is shrewdly suspected one couldn't get trusted for a spoon of thread? Why give a well social function to an aristocratic few and then be annoyed because the excluded dames on both sides of the street enjoy the innocent diversion of sitting behind their lace curtains in the dark to see and count the approaching guests and comment on the richness of their attire?

What harm does it do for them to know what is going on inside the house as well as though they could see through clap-board and double back plaster? It is probable that they could report the affair in detail, down to the "refreshments of ice cream and cake," which were easily surmised from the extra trip of the ice man and the pounding and churning in the afternoon.

Verily, to be secretive in such an atmosphere is to be ridiculous, as an ostrich hiding under its own wings and is especially foolish since all this personal interest serves to clothe us with more importance than we are at all entitled to.

Boy Cured of Colic After Physician's Treatment Had Failed.

My boy when four years old was taken with colic and cramps in his stomach. I sent for the doctor and he injected morphine, but the child kept growing worse. I then gave him half a teaspoonful of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy, and in half an hour he was sleeping and soon recovered.—F. L. WILKINS, Shell Lake, Wis.
